BREEDING STATIONS FOR POULTRY.

At this season of the year every farmer is interested in introducing new blood into his flock. Probably the best way is buy eggs of a superior Bred-to-lay strain of purebred fowls. Mr. G. B. Curran, of the Agricultural Office, Napanee, is planning to establish Breeding Stations for Purebred Poultry over the country from which superior strains of Poultry may be distributed to farmers in the neighborhood. The plan is quite simple, and can be satisfactorily worked out by any farmer who will follow the instructions of the Department.

As the first step, if the farmer has a good flock of purebred poultry, he must introduce new cockerels from an outside source approved by the Department. If the flock is not purebred, eggs for hatching from a superior bred-to-lay strain must be obtained and the chickens hatched from these will form the foundation of a purebred flock. Mr. Curran and his Assistant will personally oversee the raising of the chickens, and next fall will gladly help to select the best pullets to be kept as breeders, and to select the best cockerels to mate with these select pullets. In the fall, the department will list the farmers who have good breeding cockerels for sale, and will aid in the disposing of these at a suitable price.

Up to the present time Mr. Curran has placed over 1200 White Wyandotte eggs for hatching purposes, and any farmer who wishes to order eggs for hatching may apply to the Agricultural Office, when he will be referred to reliable breeders. White Wyandotte, Barred Rock, Rhode Island Red, and Leghorn eggs may be ordered at prices according to the quality. At the present time Mr. Curran has a number of farmers on his list who are supplying eggs for hatching.

All farmers who wish to avail themselves of the offer of the Department to establish a Breeding Station for pure-bred poultry on their farm are invited to apply to Mr. G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office, Napanee, stating breed and number of hens.

Have you tried the new "Radiolite" lamp burner? It burns the oil in the form of a gas, consequently no smoke or odor from the lamp, and a much brighter light obtained. Sole agency for Napanee at Hooper's—Napanee's Largest Drug Store.

SEED FOR EXPERIMENTAL PLOTS.

It has been the custom in counties where an Agricultural Office has been established, for the District Representative to conduct Experimental Plots. However, the Department of Agriculture feel that the greatest possible good can not be done by the experimental plot method, for the reason that but very few farmers ever see the plots. The new method adopted by Mr. Curran is to give to all farmers who will plant and tend a small experimental plot, seed of a superior strain. These plots will be possible good can not be done by the experimental plot method, for the reason that but very few farmers ever see the plots. The new method adopted by Mr. Curran is to give to all farmers who will plant and tend a small experimental plot, seed of a superior strain. These plots will be inspected at least once during the summer. Every farmer who applies will receive sufficient seed to plant a good sized plot. Three pound samples of Lincoln Oats, O.A.C. No. 21 Barley; White Cap Yellow Dent and Wisconsin No. 7, Ensilage Corn; Longfellow Flint Corn; Canadian Standard (late) and Early Eureka potatoes, will be distributed free to all applicants as long as the supply lasts. By carefully planting this seed and carefully harvesting, next year one will have enough seed to sow  $\frac{1}{4}$  of an acre of land, and the next year enough to sow a small field. In this way every farmer can soon obtain a high-yielding strain of corn, potatoes, or grain for his farm.

The Lincoln Oats selected won first prize at Guelph and Ottawa Winter Fairs, and won first in the Field Crop Competition. The sample is hand picked and weighs 50 lbs. to the bushel. The O. A. C. No. 21 Barley won first prize at Guelph Winter Fair. Canadian Standard potatoes are a new variety originated in the Peace River District. The sample was grown in Muskoka and won first prize for best bag of potatoes (sweepstakes) shown at both Guelph and Ottawa Winter Fairs. Early Eureka Potatoes have proved the best yielding early variety of potatoes in experiments at the Ontario Agricultural College. The Longfellow Flint Corn was grown by L. D. Hankinson, winner of sweepstakes for flint corn at the Ontario Corn Show. Every farmer who wishes one sample of seed should apply as early as possible to Mr. G. B. Curran, Agricultural Office, Napanee, and have their name placed on the list, as the supply of this superior seed is limited.

You had better get what wire fence you need now. It is going fast, our very low price is the reason. M. S. MADOLE.

LIBERAL CLUB FEDERATION.

The aggressive attractive policy of development and expansion is to be the rule for the new Liberal Club Federation of Ontario formed in Toronto with great success on March 24th. The Executive Committee of the new organization met in Toronto on March 29th and immediately began to put into effect suggestions made at the Federation meeting for the extension and improvement of Liberal Clubs.

The Federation meeting itself was an unqualified success. Delegates were present from all parts of Ontario, and there was apparent an enthusiastic determination to make the new movement count for much. The hope was expressed that through it the young men of the Province would become more interested in political questions in the Province. Hon. Mackenzie King was present to give his best wishes to the new organization. In the evening the delegates were entertained at dinner in the palatial new Ontario Club. Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., M.P.P., was toast-master and a number of splendid speeches were given by young men from various Clubs.

DR. COLEMAN'S LECTURE

Last Friday evening Dr. A. P. Coleman, head of the department of Geology in the University of Toronto, delivered a lecture at the regular meeting of the Lennox and Addington Historical Society on "South Africa" which will long be remembered by those who were fortunate enough to hear him. Dr. Coleman lectured in Historical Hall about four years ago and his splendid lecture at that time insured a good audience. On Friday night the Hall was filled and everyone was delighted with the evening's entertainment. The lecturer was one of the most distinguished members of a party of about five hundred scientists who made the trip to South Africa a year or two ago and while there he secured photographs of many interesting places. From these he made a fine series of lantern slides with which to illustrate his lecture. Starting at Cape Town he travelled up the celebrated "Cape to Cairo" railroad as far as the wonderful Victoria Falls upon the Zambezi river and every important point was carefully described. His views included parts of Cape Town, the country to the north of that city, Kimberley and its celebrated diamond mines, scenes on the Veldt and of the "dry" rivers, parts of Johannesburg, the graves of Canadian soldiers who lost their lives in the South African war, the gold mines at Johannesburg, the method of travelling when away from the railroad, several views in Rhodesia, the grave of Cecil Rhodes, and many splendid views of Victoria Falls. Every picture was explained with great care and Dr. Coleman's description of the fall and their discovery by Livingstone and his biographical notes on both Cecil

In the Millinery Department

The new hats for spring are so different from those of previous seasons that everyone is eager to see them.

The display is a brilliant one, for though most of the hats are small, trimmings of vivid color are greatly in evidence. Another point to be noticed is that many of the smartest hats are very lightly trimmed. A tall mount cleverly confected of feathers, flowers, or ribbons, may be all, but, it must be placed "just-so," and none but the cleverest and most inspired of milliners can hope to produce the chic and becoming results apparent in these new models.

Every picture was explained with great care and Dr. Coleman's description of the fall and their discovery by Livingstone and his biographical notes on both Cecil Rhodes and Dr. Livingstone added very materially to the interest of the subject. He closed his remarks while an exquisite colored picture of the Victoria Falls was still on the screen. The President of the Society thanked Dr. Coleman for again favoring the people of Napanee with a lecture and he explained how proud all Canadians should be of the place which Dr. Coleman occupied in so eminent a group of scientists from all parts of the world.

Mr. Editor :—The Napanee Branch of Ontario Department of Agriculture has constructed a cotton front hen house which they call "The Ideal style of a hen house for the Farmers" and backs it up with the statement that "One egg in the winter is worth two in the summer," but I fail to see where they get two in the winter. are going about in boats and carrying away their household effects oftentimes from second story windows.
The district flooded on the south shore extends from St. Lambert to near the eastern part of the town, is sur-hundred pupils are in terror. The building being of recent construction, the students will not be removed un-homes in St. Lambert are flooded, as

TORONTO, April 1.—Every clerk, officer or servant employed in the civil service at the seat of government in Toronto, whether at the Parliament Buildings or at Osgoode Hall, stands to benefit by the pension bill introduced by Hon. W. H. Hearst, Minister of Lands, Forests and Mines, at yesterday's session of the House. On its being placed before the members the Minister made it clear that the Government endorsed neither the form nor principle of the measure, and that a second reading would not be asked,
but that it would stand in abeyance for a year to draw the criticisms and suggestions of interested parties.

He explained that it dealt primarily with the "inside" service, and had originated in their organization at the Parliament Buildings, but that the draft bill had not yet received consideration sufficient to merit its passing into legislation.

The bill stipulates that every one who participates in the benefits of the pension allowance must have spent at least ten years in continuous service, and the allowance will be calculated on the average yearly salary during the last three years. In any case, it is not to exceed one-fiftieth of the average salary, multiplied by the total number of years, and not more than 30 years will be taken into account in reckoning the amount.
Thus a man who had spent this term in one of the Departments and whose average salary in the last three years was $1,000, would receive a retiring pension of $600.

Any one who, through ill-health or infirmity, or because of a change in the offices, has suffered, will be subject

The only other bill of importance to seriously demand the attention of the House was that of Mr. Rowell, asking power for trustees of the Methodist Church to transfer church property to representatives of other denominations. The tendency towards church union, which is daily becoming more apparent, and the desire of the smaller churches to unite temporarily, he claimed, made this legislation necessary.

A score of bills were given their third readings, but nothing of a contentious nature appeared in any, and the House prepared for the resumption of the woman suffrage problem.

Mr. Wm. McDonald (Centre Bruce), however, was unable to be present and an adjournment was taken.

Began With Love Letters.

Samuel Richardson, the first English novelist, began his literary career by acting as scribe for a number of young women, for whose correspondence with their sweethearts he frequently supplied not only the words, but the sentiments. His reputation for this kind of composition led a firm of printers to propose that he should prepare a "complete letter writer" for the use of "those country readers who cannot indite for themselves." Two or three of the epistles written for this purpose suggested a separate story, "and thence," in Richardson's own phrase, "sprang Pamela."

In "Memories of James MacNeill Whistler," by Thomas R. Way, the author says:

"Once I questioned Whistler as to the authenticity of a black and white portrait of himself, on brown paper, which my father had bought from him and afterward fancied was by some other artist. The reply was amusing; it was to the effect that he was not in the habit of collecting the works of his contemporaries, but that at one period of his life he had made a practice of drawing his own portrait each night before going to bed and that doubtless this was one such."

The first mortgage real estate bond is simply the modern form of the real estate mortgage, equally safe and far more convenient and convertible. At dinner one night at the club a stranger was present, and Harry Leigh asked who was the gentleman at the head of the table. "That is Colonel Duff." "Oh!" "Yes, that is Halliday's brother." "I thought his name was Halliday." "He took the name of Halliday as a nom de plume." "Oh! I see—positive Duff, comparative Duffer, superlative Halliday."—London Standard.

A Comb In the Claw.

Many birds possess a useful comb in the claw of the middle toe of the foot. This has been noticed in owls, nightjars, herons, terns, cormorants, gannets, etc. It has been explained as a means of holding the prey securely. The comb is sometimes replaced by a curved blade with teeth, which run along the inner side of the claw. Such a blade is found in razorbills, wild ducks, gulls, starlings and many other birds. Where a comb is required the inner edge of this blade becomes divided into teeth. Young nightjars or goatsuckers have only the blade, but old ones have a well developed comb.

He remained always faithful to true bohemian principles, fully understanding the value of leisure.

Keeping the Body in Repair

Nature intended that the body should do its own repairing—and it would do so were it not for the fact that most of us live other than a natural life.

Nature didn't intend that we should wear corsets, tight collars or shoes, nor live in badly ventilated and draughty houses, nor eat and drink some of the things that we do, nor ride in street cars when we should walk.

The consequence is that the body when it gets out of order must look for outside help to make the necessary repairs.

far enough, on his own motion assume the Chair, order the debate to stop, and command the Chairman to put the question.

It is a very dangerous precedent that the Borden Government has established, especially when it is considered that in Canada the Speaker is not a permanent paid official of the House as in England, but is necessarily a partisan, elected from the ranks of the Government and subject to office should he lose his seat in Parliament. The present case emphasises the wisdom of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's proposal in 1911, that the Speaker's office should be made permanent as in England, as it also emphasises the determination of the Borden Government to rule by force when they cannot rule by reason.

MR. CHURCHILL'S NAVAL SPEECH.

A completely new phase has been put upon the naval situation with the pronouncement of Winston Churchill's Naval budget speech. The speech came at a most fortunate time for Canada, during the breathing space after the recent fierce Parliamentary contest over the Borden Naval Bill. It came at a most unfortunate moment for Mr. Borden and his crew of emergency shouters. It came at a still more unfortunate time for those who deride Canada's capacity for building her own navy or the advisability of her doing so.

The most important feature of Mr. Churchill's speech is its merciless riddling of the emergency theory, and his warning to the Empire that there should be no "silly panic." Mr. Churchill outlined the British building programme and showed that apart from what the Overseas Dominions might do, by the year 1920 Great Britain would have 41 super-Dreadnoughts to Germany's 24, and also have a superiority of much more than 2 to 1 in vessels of the pre-Dreadnought classes. If war should break out to-day, he declared, Great Britain would have 70 war vessels of all kinds, mobilized and ready for battle tomorrow, while the service and training of every man afloat would be at the very least twice as great as that of any other navy in the world.

This is very different language to Mr. Borden's philippics about the boozing of distant thunder and lightning flashes on the horizon, and his declaration that "We will not wait and deliberate until any impending storm shall have burst upon us in its fury and with disaster." In Mr. Churchill's own words it is very evident that Mr. Borden was seized with a "silly panic."

There are many other important points in this most important speech. Although the British Naval Estimates were nearly $232,000,000, Mr. Churchill said they would have been substantially higher but for the congestion in the British shipyards owing to the extraordinary demand for naval work, and especially because of the scarcity of skilled labour, while the continual increase in the navy made it more and more difficult to secure sufficient officers and men.

Could stronger arguments be adduced in support of the belief of the Canadian Liberal party, backed by the powerful opinion of the London Times, that it would be for the benefit of the Empire that its naval plants should not be concentrated in the Mother Land, but located throughout the Dominions also? Could a stronger argument be presented in support of the Liberals' belief that Canada should build up a navy of her own and also build up the necessary skilled labour and plants for such work? That Canada should also train personnel to in time man and maintain the navy, which is what Japan did, first with British officers and trainers, until she

A WISER GOVERNMENT

BULLYING HAS CEASED AND THE OPPOSITION AIDS IN EXPEDIT- ING BUSINESS.

Ottawa, March 29th, 1913.—With the resumption of Parliament after the Easter recess, there has come a remarkable change of atmosphere in the Green Chamber. There is no more dictation from the Premier. No more bullying commands that the Opposition must pass the second clause of his Naval Tribute Bill, or the house be kept in session for hundreds of hours at a stretch. The imaginary emergency of Empire has been forgotten in the real emergency of the need of money.

Premier Borden has suddenly awakened from his dreams of Imperial centralization to a realization that before chasing emergent phantasmagoria to their liars in the North Sea, it is the duty of the Government to at least provide the necessary funds for carrying on the affairs of the country. The Naval emergency has been put in cold storage and the Opposition has immediately joined with the Government in an effort to make up for the time Mr. Borden's tactless obstinacy has wasted in that before the financial inent's programme. The British First Lord of the Admiralty not only said that Canada could not build or man battleships, but that "The cost of laying down the plant alone would at a rough estimate be £15,000,000.

The Berlin correspondent of the London Times gives a report of the Vulcan shipbuilding Company of Stettin and Hamburg, one of the largest battleship building firms of Germany. This shows that the total share capital of this Company, which employs 12,000 workmen, is £750,000, and that capital was only increased to such an amount in 1909 when the Company installed additional shipbuilding yards at Hamburg. There seems to be a big gap between £750,000 which has equipped one of the largest warship building firms of Germany and Mr. Churchill's figure of £15,000,000.

A DANGEROUS PRECEDENT.

The first thing that the Government did on the resumption of business after the Easter vacation was to give definite force of precedent to the theory that the Speaker can at his own sweet will suddenly break in upon the sittings of a Committee of the Whole, assume the Chair, and dictate the course of events for the time being. This is what Speaker Sproule did on the night of March 15th, when the efforts of Chairman Robidoux to apply ing on the affairs of the country. The Naval emergency has been put in cold storage and the Opposition has immediately joined with the Government in an effort to make up for the time Mr. Borden's tactless obstinacy has wasted, so that before the financial year closes on March 31st, the absolutely necessary Departmental supplies may be voted. As soon as the Premier dropped the big stick and allowed reason to resume its sway, he was met by Sir Wilfrid with a frank desire to facilitate public business which at once disarmed the cries of factious opposition.

When approached by Mr. Borden Sir Wilfrid Laurier promptly agreed to the passage in toto of one-sixth of the estimates for all the regular routine work of the Departments and old works, merely leaving out the more contentious or political votes, and this work is now going on, so that the ordinary business of the country is not being interfered with.

There is now nothing to hinder the progress of Canada's public business in Parliament, unless Mr. Borden should insist upon returning to the battle which has proved so disastrous to him and demand an immediate passage of the Naval Bill. His emergency, conceived at Drummond-Arthabaska, born with the Nationalist alliance in the campaign of 1911 and presented to the world on December 5th last, has already died the early death that such hybrids deserve.

Now the position is perfectly clear. The Liberal party has been firm that Mr. Borden has no mandate from the people for the revolutionary change in Canada's relation to the Empire involved in his Naval Tribute policy, and that it is not to be adopted so far as they are concerned as long as they can prevent it. Mr. Borden has had to retreat from his position that until this Bill is passed the country's business shall be neglected, and has consented to carry on the necessary business and catch up some of the arrears of work caused by his stubborn attempt to subjugate Parliament. So far, therefore, the victory is entirely with the Liberals.

Meanwhile, the Naval Bill is promised for next week and the Opposition is threatened with a closure measure if they will not submit to Mr. Borden's will. The answer to this was clearly given by Sir Wilfrid Laurier in his last manifesto, that the Liberal party will be responsible to the people's will but not be submissive to Mr. Borden's attempts to force upon the people a policy not approved by them.

It is very well known in the corridors of Parliament that since returning from their constituencies the Tory members have lost their enthusiasm for the Naval Bill, and still more lost any desire for an election upon it. On every side the word has gone out that there must be no election because the Contribution policy is unpopular everywhere and would send the Borden Government to inevitable defeat. On the other hand, the Liberals members have returned more determined than ever to enforce a constitutional appeal to the people on such a reversal of Canada's national policy. Their opposition is not from any selfish desire to attain power; they are simply assuming the historic role of Liberalism, which is that Government should represent the considered and expressed will of the people.

WHAT A NAVAL SHIPBUILDING PLANT COSTS.

Some interesting figures regarding the cost of plants for building warships are contained in the Berlin correspondence to the London Times of March 10th last, which make it apparent that Mr. Winston Churchill in his famous secret Memorandum to Premier Borden used a good deal of imagination in his effort to help the Canadian Govern-the sittings of a Committee of the Whole, assume the Chair, and dictate the course of events for the time being. This is what Speaker Sproule did on the night of March 15th, when the efforts of Chairman Robidoux to apply the "gag" to the Opposition backed by a tumultuous encouragement of the Government members, threw the House into an unprecedented uproar. Hon. H. R. Emerson brought the matter up, not to convey any censure upon the Speaker, but to definitely establish whether any Speaker could of his own motion take such a course. Mr. Emerson in a very clear and dispassionate manner argued the matter from constitutional precedents and showed that such a procedure was neither in accord with the spirit nor practice of the British constitution.

Plainly conscious of the weakness of their case, the Government put up a back bencher, Mr. Meighen of Portage la Prairie, to reply. He hunted up records as far back as 1675—a period when members of Parliament habitually wore swords and other weapons,—to an occasion when the Committee had been interrupted by the Speaker. He, however, only made the case worse because the authorities cited showed that the custom had always been that the Chairman of Committee should report to the Speaker before he took action.

It was pointed out by Sir Wilfrid Laurier that it was the invariable course in British Parliaments that when the House was in Committee the Chairman had the same duties to preserve order as the Speaker, and that the latter only had the right of an ordinary member until the Chairman reported to him; further that if the Committee rise without reporting progress and requesting leave to sit again, the matter before it automatically became extinct—so that technically the Naval Bill was killed by the Committee rising when Speaker Sproule interrupted to take the Chair without progress being reported.

The incident was made worse by the imprudence of Hon. W. T. White, who dealt with the uproar on the night in question. He tried in a partisan manner to make it appear that the Opposition was responsible for the turbulence of the House. Hon. Mr. White finished by advancing the novel argument that the Speaker was the arbiter and censor of the House and could assume the Chair whenever he thought fit, whether the Chairman was doing his duty or not.

Even his Leader, Mr. Borden, was compelled to administer an indirect rebuke to the Minister of Finance on this point, when he replied to Sir Wilfrid Laurier saying,—"I think he (Sir Wilfrid) had very properly omitted any allusion to the particular incident out of which the debate arose."

Hon. Mr. White took the ground that it was the Speaker's duty at all times to preserve order. To this Sir Wilfrid Laurier quoted rule 14 of the House which said—"The Chairman of the Committee of the Whole House shall maintain order in the Committee deciding all questions of order, subject to appeal to the House."

On the night in question the Chairman not only did not preserve order, but actually precipitated disorder by following the Government's concerted plan of applying the "gag" summarily to the Opposition. He did not then report to the Speaker in any way. Speaker Sproule of his own arbitrary intent assumed the Chair and summarily ordered the Chairman to give his ruling, declaring that the debate must not go further.

If this precedent should rule, as would appear from the action of the Government, the Speaker is now clothed with an authority never known before. Under it he might at any time when the House was in Committee, suddenly decide that a debate had gone up a navy of her own and also build up the necessary skilled labour and plants for such work? That Canada should also train personnel to man and maintain the navy, which is what Japan did, first with British officers and trainers, until she was able to take the whole thing over?

Mr. Churchill proceeded—"With remorseless persistency scores of millions are being absolutely squandered, while every year all the naval powers are making not only the fleets of their rivals, but their own fleets, obsolete, without adding to their relative strength or security. Could any process be more stupid?

Not very comforting words these for Mr. Borden, whose present ambition is to dragoon Parliament and the country into joining in this very "stupid process."

Further Mr. Churchill points out that while Great Britain is able to send strong squadrons to aid any oversea Dominion, this capacity will be reduced as the danger zones in European waters increase. "It behoves the Dominions therefore, to make exertions for their own and the common safety, whether by provision of local navies or by what is more effectual, making additions to the Imperial navy, to increase the world wide mobility of its squadron."

Could a stronger argument be devised in support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier's statement that the policy of the Overseas Dominions should be that as each ship is withdrawn by Britain to home waters, that ship should be replaced by one of the Dominion's own?

In view of the remarkable statement made by the British First Lord of the Admiralty during this period of consideration in the Canadian Parliament it seems hardly too much to ask that Mr. Borden should reconsider his whole position. In his last manifesto he showed a sober second thought when he said that if the people at the next election desired it, the three dreadnoughts could be demanded back from Britain to be used in connection with a Canadian fleet. Why not first find out what the people do demand and then go ahead, or else adopt the Laurier plan which is already known and approved by the people and the Admiralty? To continue saying that there is any emergency is not merely silly, it is criminal.

It should not be forgotten that it was the strong position taken by the Canadian Liberals, after the production of Mr. Churchill's Memorandum in which he argued Canada's incapacity to build or man a navy, which undoubtedly compelled him to make so clear a statement of the actual position.

MR. BORDEN'S MANIFESTO.

Premier Borden in his manifesto, March 24th, said:—

"If the contracts are let with the utmost despatch for the construction of three battleships they would not be ready to be placed in commission before the next general election. In case it should be the will of the Canadian people to recall these ships and make them up a navy of her own and also build up the necessary skilled labour and plants for such work? That Canada should also train personnel to man and maintain the navy, which is what Japan did, first with British officers and trainers, until she was able to take the whole thing over?

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonial.

naval puryoses according to Mr. Churchill. This would seem to mean that the Canadian ships might have to be built elsewhere than in Britain, necessitating perhaps the establishment of shipyards in Canada. If this were so, it would quite change the situation, so far, at least, as the Opposition is concerned."

If this were merely the expression of the Ottawa Citizen it would be of little interest. But coming from a journal which is so frequently used as the official mouth piece of the Government one may well ask what its real significance is.

MOUNT SHASTA.

Snow Banners of the World's Most Impressive Mountain.

Travelers declare that Mount Shasta is the most impressive mountain in the world, for it stands solitary and alone. Unlike Pikes peak and many other of the world's great mountains, it is not surrounded by a number of lesser ones, and its tremendous height—14,140 feet—is appreciated by the eye.

It is sublimely grand and yet gracefully beautiful. Against the blue of a

MONSTER HEADDRESSES.

Women at One Time Wore Fleets of Vessels in Their Hair.

Marie Antoinette had a passion for extraordinary headdresses. One structure that she invented was forty-five inches in height and was composed of many yards of gauze and ribbon. From the folds sprang bunches of roses, and the entire edifice was surmounted by a waving plume of white feathers. It is recorded that when Maria Theresa received a portrait of her daughter wearing this headdress she exclaimed: "This is no daughter of mine! It is the portrait of an actress!"

The Duchess de Chartres, determined to surpass the queen, designed a headdress two inches higher. It was made up of many plumes waving at the top of a tower. Two waxen figures, representing the little Comte de Beaujolais (the brother of Louis Philippe) in his nurse's arms, were worn as ornaments. Beside them a parrot picked at a plate of cherries, and the wax figure of a black boy reclined at the nurse's feet. On different parts of the tower were the initials of the duchesse's husband, her father and her father-in-law, made from her own hair.

At this time France and England were at war. In a naval engagement the French frigate Licorne struck her flag, but the Belle Poule, another French vessel, crippled the Hector, an English man-of-war. As the Frenchmen were about to board two English vessels bore down to their consort's assistance, and the Belle Poule sailed away. The English fleet returned to Plymouth with two prizes, the Licorne and a French lugger.

The French, although they had lost a frigate, proclaimed a victory. The queen and her women wore headdresses that represented the Belle Poule under full sail plowing a sea of green gauze in pursuit of the English frigate. This construction was known as the "coiffure Belle Poule."

The wife of an English officer living in Paris deemed the headdress an insult to the English navy and determined to resent it. At the next public occasion therefore she appeared carrying on her head five English line of battle ships, a French frigate and a lugger. An arrangement of silk and gauze represented Plymouth harbor, which the English ships, with their prizes, were entering. Each vessel carried a streamer that bore its name, and on the edifice at the back the word "Plymouth" appeared in glittering beads.

The audacity of the spirited English-woman struck every one dumb except the chief of police, who invited her to cross the frontier at her earliest convenience.—Youth's Companion.

MEANING OF "POTLUCK."

One Plunge of the Ladle, and Take What You Get.

The real origin of the word "potluck" is unknown to most of the people who use it. In Limoges, France, however, one runs into potluck itself. In a certain corner of that quaint city of jostling roofs there is still segregated, much as if in a ghetto, a Saracen population, probably a remnant of the wave of Saracens that swept over Europe hundreds of years ago. Here they

FREE ADVICE TO SICK WOMEN

Thousands Have Been Helped By Common Sense Suggestions.

Women suffering from any form of female ills are invited to communicate promptly with the woman's private correspondence department of the Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence. A woman can freely talk of her private illness to a woman; thus has been established a confidential correspondence which has extended over many years and which has never been broken. Never have they published a testimonial or used a letter without the written consent of the writer, and never has the Company allowed these confidential letters to get out of their possession, as the hundreds of thousands of them in their files will attest.

Out of the vast volume of experience which they have to draw from, it is more than possible that they possess the very knowledge needed in your case. Nothing is asked in return except your good will, and their advice has helped thousands. Surely any woman, rich or poor, should be glad to take advantage of this generous offer of assistance. Address Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co., (confidential) Lynn, Mass.

HOW TO SAVE.

Hints For Fighting the High Cost of Living.

The problem of how to lighten the cost of high living is a vital one today, and especially is this question absorbing to the poor man's wife. Her household motto should surely be to make the best of everything. Ruskin says, "Industry without art is brutality." And that is justly so of the homemaker. Her duty is to make her home just as attractive as possible, and to do that she must keep in mind that "a penny earned" and that every piece of food thrown out is money thrown away.

Here are four things that help much in lowering the cost of high living:

They are buy in as large quantities as possible, thereby getting a reduction. Use things in season, when they are cheapest. When egg prices soar search your cook book and household magazines for "eggless recipes." Make a systematic collection of economical nutritious dishes.

When eggs are high in making doughnuts boil and mash a good-sized potato, beat it in with the sugar and make the doughnuts as usual without

There seems to be a serious

Far up on its base the dark green of the timber line is met by the virgin whiteness of Shasta's snow, and then on, up and up, far past the summer clouds, points the alabaster pyramid.

Shasta is an extinct volcano and has two large glaciers. The Whitney glacier is visible from the railroad. It looks like a narrow streak of snow, but it is over a mile in width and is seamed with great fissures and crevasses.

At times a natural banner is unfurled from Shasta's peak. This is called the "snow banner of Shasta." It only oc-

Wasted Effort.

"Now, waiter," said the new customer in a certain restaurant of the less fashionable type, "I want an oyster stew, and I want you to give the cook particular directions. The milk must be carefully heated first—just short of boiling. Then the oysters must be added without the juice. That must not be put in until the seasoning

Mill Ponds. Use the best milk and gilt edged creamery butter. Now, do you think you understand?" "Yessir," said the waiter. And he went to the kitch-

Jones—You don't need to.

"How so?"

"Just walk five miles or so, and every twenty or thirty yards hit the pavement a hard whack with your stick and swear."—Exchange.

Nature's Methods.

Nature is no spendthrift, but takes the shortest way to her ends. As the general says to his soldiers, "If you want a fort, build a fort," so nature makes every creature do its own work and gets its living, be it planet, animal or tree.—Emerson.

often like a switch on a railway track smooth rolling prosperity.

ed, much as if in a ghetto, a Saracen population, probably a remnant of the wave of Saracens that swept over Europe hundreds of years ago. Here they live in their crooked, narrow streets, following old customs handed down from generation to generation. There are many butcher shops in the quarter, and outside of each steams a great pot of soup over a glowing brazier. In each pot stands a ladle as ancient as the pot.

When a customer comes with a penny, in goes the ladle and comes up full of savory broth and chunks of meat, odds and ends that the butcher has had left over. And what comes up the customer has to take. One can imagine how anxiously the hungry urchin or the mother of seven must eye the inexorable ladle and how a pretty girl might get another draw from the butcher's boy.

At any rate, "to take potluck" means to take what you get and say nothing, whether the pot is in Limoges or in the flat of the man who eagerly invites a friend of his youth to dinner.—New York Sun.

Gives Warning of a Storm.

In the bay of Biscay frequently during the autumn and winter in calm weather a heavy sea gets up and rolls in on the coast four and twenty hours before the gale which causes it arrives and of which it is the prelude. In this case the wave action, generated on the other side of the Atlantic by the wind, travels at a much greater rate than that of the body of disturbed air and thus gives warning of the coming storm.

So Unreasonable.

"She's been very busy telling me how to rear my baby."

"Well?"

"But she got into a perfect panic when I asked her to take care of the child for a couple of days. You know I was suddenly called out of town."—Washington Herald.

A Frank Admission.

"I suppose you are interested in reform," said the conscientious citizen.

"No," replied Farmer Corntosse; "I approve of it. But I can't say that it's generally expressed in a way that makes it as interesting as the continued stories."—Washington Star.

rical nutritious dishes.

When eggs are high in making doughnuts boil and mash a good-sized potato, beat it in with the sugar and make the doughnuts as usual without any eggs.

In making pumpkin or squash pies in place of eggs roll crackers fine and use as much of them in bulk as you would of eggs. You could not tell the difference if you did not know.

When you want pudding for dinner and have no milk try adding another egg and a few more raisins and use warm water in place of milk.

Beef loaf is a fine dish in which the cheaper cuts of meat are never recognized. To make it take one and one-half cupfuls of stale breadcrumbs or cracker crumbs, two pounds of ground beef, three teaspoonfuls of salt, seasoning to taste. Mix with water or water and milk, using as much as you can, and have the meat hold together. Bake about one hour in a bread tin. Thicken the liquid left in the pan for gravy.

Pork in batter is another good way to employ the cheap meat. Make a batter of one egg beaten with one-third cupful of milk and enough flour to make the consistency of pancake batter. Fry some slices of salt pork until they look clear and are beginning to crisp, then dip in the batter until well covered. Return to hot fat until well done. Serve with baked potatoes.

Lamb a la Creole.—This is an attractive way to serve up cold lamb and is tasty and economical. Mince a green pepper after the seeds are removed and half a small onion and cook them together in two tablespoonfuls of butter for five minutes. Stir in four tablespoonfuls of flour. When it is well blended add a cupful of stewed and strained tomatoes and a cupful of the liquor in which the lamb was cooked, or, if it happens to be cold roast lamb, use water or good gravy thinned a little. Cook till the mixture is smooth and thick, season to taste with salt and pepper and turn in two cupfuls of cold lamb cut into small pieces. Stir and cook for six minutes. Make a hollow in a mound of hot boiled rice and turn the ragout into and over it.

Beef Liver Lyonnaise. — Procure about a pound and a half of beef liver, slice it thin and lay it in a wide frying pan, sprinkle with salt and pepper and two tablespoonfuls of olive oil. When ready to cook, put the pan on a brisk fire and brown the liver nicely on both sides. Take the liver out and put on a dish to keep hot. Add to pan two onions cut into thin shreds. Toss them over the fire till tender, then add a tablespoonful of flour and a tablespoonful of chopped parsley. Stir and mix well and add a cupful of hot water. When these are smooth and boiling return the liver to the frying pan and make it very hot. Arrange it on a hot platter and pour the sauce over it and send to the table with a dish of baked potatoes.

White Africans.

The Berbers, who, although African, are as white as Europeans, are the oldest white race on record, says an explorer. They are supposed to have come from the south of Europe in ancient days. The Dundee Advertiser says, and, although their language and customs are entirely different from ours and their religion Mohammedan, they are probably closely akin by descent. Blue eyes and fair hair are not at all uncommon among the Berbers, and many of them have rosy cheeks and features so like Englishmen that were they dressed in British fashion they would easily pass as natives of the British Isles.

INOPPORTUNE DEATHS.

Men Who Might Have Changed History Had They Been Spared.

Julius Caesar was assassinated when he had almost completed the task of consolidating the administration and dominion of the Roman empire, and his death opened the way to that despotism and corruption which ultimately undid his work.

Henry of Navarre was killed when he had almost healed the differences between Catholic and Protestant which subsequently rent not only France, but Europe, and William the Silent also fell when he was on the point of uniting the Netherland provinces into a compact barrier against the encroachments of Spain.

In English history Lord Clive died at the moment when he was the one man who could have saved the American colonies and kept the Anglo-Saxon race united.

But there is the case of Mirabaud. He was literally the one man in France who could have averted the horrors of the revolution, saved and reformed the monarchy and so spared Europe the murderous career of Napoleon and all the devastation it brought. If he had lived ten or even five years longer the history not only of France, but of Europe and the world, would have been different. It is, in fact, sufficient to say that he would have made both Robespierre and Napoleon impossible.—Strand Magazine.

A Grewsome Toy.

War and bloodshed seem always to have reacted on the nursery. In 1793, for instance, the German child was humored with a toy guillotine for Christmas, and Goethe wrote to his mother at Frankfort asking her to send one of these little instruments for a boy friend. Mme. Goethe was indignant. "Dear son," she wrote, "I have only one desire, and that is to give you pleasure. I will execute any command, but buy such an infamous machine of slaughter I will not in any circumstances. If I could I would arrest the makers and burn such toys by the executioner."

The Harmony of Colors

The principle that the sensations produced by white light from the equal mixture of sensations produce three fundamental colors—red, green, and blue—was discovered naturally from an analysis of the spectrum. Colored lights do not focus at the same point. Therefore the eye sees different distances at the same time to see when different surfaces touch. The difference in the refrangibility of the different colors causes some colors to appear closer to the eye than others, and others to stand back. A red object appears to be farther away than a blue object, though it is seen on the same surface and in the same light.—Harper's Magazine

The Scholar.

Dr. Evans, a witty member of parliament at Melbourne, was a man, and the other member spoke of him as belonging to Queen Anne.

Once while making a speech referred to Queen Anne and was interrupted by a woman with cries of "Did you know what she was like?"

"Yes, sir," retorted the doctor, "she knew her. The scholar is considered with all time."

Going to an Expert

When the butcher answered the phone the shrill voice of a grocer greeted him:

"Hello! Is this Mr. Wilson?"

"Yes, Bessie," he answered.

"What can I do for you?"

"Oh, Mr. Wilson, please tell me where grandpa's liver is! The doctor said it was out and I've got to put it back in, and I don't know where it is."—Ladies' Home Journal.

Putting It Up to Him

"Patience is a virtue," said philosophically.

"True," replied his wife, "but he ought to be earning more money." "And I'll provide the patient family if you'll only provide the time."—Detroit Free Press.

Borrowing Trouble

"Ever since his wife has been away he has been looking for trouble."

"He oughtn't to worry; a woman can't get along without a man."—Houston Post.

A judicious silence is always better than truth spoken without consideration.

Goats.

During the past few months the Live Stock Branch of the Dominion Department of Agriculture has been in receipt of numerous inquiries as to where it might be possible to purchase either Angora or Milch goats. It would appear that in many parts of the Dominion the demand for these useful and profitable animals is rapidly developing and that those who at present have any surplus stock can find a ready sale for them if a channel of communication between supply and demand is established. Accordingly as a means of starting a convenient Directory of Canadian Breeders of Angora Goats and Milch Goats, the Live Stock Commissioner will be pleased to receive from such breeders information regarding their respective flocks covering the following points:

1. Kind and number of goats kept.
2. Usual number for sale each year.
3. Approximately the prices asked.
4. If possible a brief statement regarding expenses found necessary and the returns which may be expected by one engaging in raising this class of stock.

Communications supplying the above information should be addressed to the Live Stock Commissioner, Ottawa, Ont. Such letters do not require postage.

PASTOR RUSSELL

Ottawa, Ont., March 30.—Pastor Russell, who since his last visit has many friends here, arrived again this morning. As usual, the largest auditorium was engaged for him. We report one of his addresses, from St. Paul's words: "Perils among false brethren." (2 Corinthians 11:26.) He said:

St. Paul was fully devoted to the Master and His cause. His faithfulness brought many trying experiences. He served Christ to such an extent that many counted him a fool. Those who opposed his teachings often raised a tumult and blamed him for it, in order to bring him into dispute, hinder his service and forward their own interests. This at times brought him to prison, and once to death's door.

Nevertheless, he rejoiced in all such experiences. None of these things moved him from faithfulness to his Master, whose servants he had persecuted before his eyes were opened. He recounts various perils from robbers, from Jews, from heathen, in the city, in the wilderness, on the sea. He winds up the list with the words of our text, "perils among false brethren."

The question arises, "Were these sufferings deserved?" Surely not! St. Paul was a noble character and bore the Message of God's grace in Christ. Then comes the question, "If his sufferings were not punishments, what were they?" We reply that, like the Master's, they were evidences of loyalty to God and of the darkness of the world, which led men to persecute him.

Darkness Hates the Light.

The Master declared that He stood for the principles of light, righteousness, truth; while Satan stands for darkness, blindness, superstition. All children of the light must be uncompromising in attitude toward wrong. Therefore the world hates them and says all manner of evil against them falsely. Yea, men will feel that they serve God when they slay the righteous, whether literally, as with Jesus and St. Paul, or by "shooting out arrows, even bitter words," the more popular present day method.

But some will say, "Times have changed! To-day our ministers are revered. No one thinks of persecuting them. All men speak well of them. Those not spoken well of today must in some way be unworthy."

How strange that we should forget! In Jesus' day did any traduce the chief is a prohibition petition of the native Blacks of South Africa, to be presented to the Parliament of that Colony. In it the natives call upon Parliament to pass a law forbidding the sale of intoxicating liquors to any colored man, woman or child, because of the debasing effect these liquors have upon the colored race. As the petitioners are registered voters and willing to be included in the prohibitory clause of such a law, it seems likely their request may be granted. In France, the women of the nation are appealing to the government for the reduction of licenses for, at present, there is a wine shop in France for every eighty-two inhabitants. As the women are not voters, it is doubtful whether their appeal will bear fruit but possibly more effect may be produced by the influence of the new commission on depopulation and from the abolition of single member constituencies where the influence of the publican is strong. In any case we see a determined effort in France to check the evil of intemperance.

Obituary.

The death of Mr. Wilbur F. Switzer at his home in Vernon, B. C., on Feb. 13th, 1913, came as a great shock to his many friends and relatives, as he had been confined to his house but 9 days, and many of his friends were not even aware of his illness.

He was born in Switzerville in the County of Lennox, where he spent his early years, was converted in a revival service held by the Rev. Alfred McCan on the Newburgh district. He married Miss Lillie Martin, of Switzerville, and for the past six years has resided at Vernon, B. C. A member of the Methodist Church, he soon became active in the work of that institution, and was much interested in the musical devotions, acting at different times in the capacity of choir leader. He was a man whom to know was to love and esteem.

To his home and its hospitality there was always a cordial welcome to the Ministers of God. He leaves a wife, one daughter, Mrs. W. J. Walton, two sons to mourn their loss, besides two brothers, Dr. E. R. Switzer, Salina, Kansas; E. B. Switzer, Switzerville, Ont., and one sister who resides on the homestead. The funeral took place on Saturday from the family residence and was largely attended by acquaintances, as well as the members of the Independent Order of Foresters of which Order the deceased was Deputy High Chief Ranger, who turned out in a body to accompany the remains of their late brother to their last resting place.

The floral tributes were many and beautiful, including wreaths from the League and various other Societies. The service at the house was conducted by his pastor, Rev. W. Elliot, who spoke in fitting terms of his acquaintance with the deceased, which had extended over a period of some years.

Leaving the residence the cortège proceeded direct to the cemetery where in addition to the regular service, the burial service of the I. O. F. was read by Past Chief Ranger Calhoun.

day must in some way be unworthy. How strange that we should forget! In Jesus' day did any traduce the chief priests and Pharisees? Were they not spoken of highly and reverenced? But the Master and His disciples were not popular. According to their own record they were styled "the filth and offscouring of the earth." The Master said that whoever persecuted them would feel that he did God service. As Jesus told some in His day, "Ye garnish the sepulchres of those whom your fathers slew, yet ye do their works." So to-day many extol the Lord and the Apostles and denounce their persecutors, while similarly they persecute.

The Master was a Jew. The Jews were His brethren according to the flesh. Yet they hated Him without a cause, persecuted Him and finally crucified Him. But St. Paul lived after Pentecost, and had Christian brethren, begotten of the Holy Spirit, fellow-members of the Body of Christ. Jesus had none such. "Of the people there were none with Him." The nearest approximation was Judas.

St. Paul knew the bitterness of persecution from false brethren—the climax of all his perils. We may be sure that such experiences were most difficult to bear; for they came from brethren of the closest possible relationship—fellow-members of the Body of Christ.

The Godly Suffer Persecution.

All faithful followers of Jesus have persecutions. These come from every quarter, but none are more cruel than those from Christian brethren. Disputes between Christians have been very bitter. History demonstrates this fact. Heretic became the most obnoxious word in the dictionary. Nothing was too bad to do against a heretic. The persecuting brethren were sometimes one denomination, sometimes another.

Thank God for the Advancement made in Christian sympathy! No longer can civilized people take pleasure in tortures, burnings, etc. The general sentiment no longer appreciates or tolerates physical torture. But who can dispute that mental torture is equally severe? In our day there are more refined ways of persecuting, torturing, etc., open to false brethren.

Evil-speaking, evil-surmising, slanders, ambiguous suggestions, etc., can be applied to the followers of Jesus to-day. Ali who take such a course are sharers with the malefactors, even though they do not indulge in physical torture.

What shall we say of the false brethren who do such things. Undoubtedly the Master still agrees with St. John's declaration, "Whosoever hateth his brother is a murderer and ye know that no murderer hath eternal life." (1 John 3:15.) Surely none with a murderous condition of heart could be suitable for joint-heirship with our Lord in His Kingdom.

CATTLE MARKETS

MONTREAL LIVE STOCK.

MONTREAL, March 31.—At the Montreal Stock Yards west end market the receipts for the week ended March 29 were 1200 cattle, 175 sheep and lambs, 2500 hogs and 1600 calves. The supply on the market this morning consisted of 800 cattle, 100 sheep and lambs, 2000 hogs and 600 calves.

A much stronger feeling prevailed in the market for cattle, and prices since this day week show an advance of 25¢ to 50¢ per 100 pounds, which may be attributed almost entirely to the short supply during the past ten days, and the improved quality of the stock coming forward, coupled with an increased demand from both butchers and packers, owing to the fact that most of them have now worked off their surplus supply, which they bought for the Easter trade. Trade was rather slow, as only actual wants were filled. The top price realized for the day was $8 per 100 pounds, which was paid for five extra choice steers, averaging 1650 pounds each. Other small lots of ordinary choice steers sold at $7.75, and full loads of this class of stock changed hands at $7.25 to $7.50, with choice butchers' cows at $6.25 to $6.50, and top quality bulls at $6 to $6.25 per 100 pounds.

A feature of the small-meat trade is the continued good demand for good to choice calves, and, as supplies of such are light, prices are well maintained at 5¢ to 7¢ per pound, but the demand for the common stock is limited. Prices for spring lambs are lower, at $5 to $7 each, as to size and quality. Yearling lambs and old sheep are scarce and firm.

A strong feeling continues to prevail in the market for hogs, and prices since this day week have scored a further advance of 25¢ to 35¢ per 100 pounds. Supplies are heavier than expected, but demand was good. Selected lots sold at $10.75 per 100 pounds, weighed off cars.

Butchers' cattle, choice, $7.50 to $7.75; do., medium, $6 to $6.75; do., common, $5 to $5.75; cannery, $3.75 to $4; butchers' cattle, choice cows, $6.25 to $6.50; do., bulls, $4.50 to $6.25; milkers, choice, each, $8 to $8.50; do., common and medium, each, $7 to $7.50; springers, $6 to $6.50.

Sheep, ewes, $5.75 to $6; bucks and rams, $5.25 to $5.50; lambs, $3.25 to $3.50. Hogs, f.o.b., $10.75. Calves, $3 to $10.

ONTARIO LEGISLATURE THE CONTROL OF SOIL MO

PREVENTION OF FLOODS.

It was inevitable that the disastrous floods in Ohio should lead to a reference in the Legislature to flood conditions in Ontario on the Grand River and on other streams.

Mr. Thomas Marshall, Liberal Member for Monk, has asked for a return showing all correspondence and petitions received by the Government in regard to the conditions on the Grand River, and also for any reports received from Government Engineers on the subject. Earlier in the session the Minister of Public Works, in answer to a question, admitted that deputations had appeared before the Government as far back as 1908 and again in 1912. The Minister also stated that a hydrographic survey of the Grand River watersheds had been made but no results of this investigation had been made public.

The problem is three-fold. First—To preserve human life. Second—to secure a steady flow of water in the rivers of the Province instead of having so much rush away in a day or two in the spring that a drought is the result in summer. Third—to conserve the extra flow of water for use in generating power. It should be definitely determined whether all three of these results can be secured together. The preservation of human life however, and the avoiding of any possibility of such a disaster as has overwhelmed Ohio is of paramount importance.

Farming is getting to be most scientific and progressive. It is therefore important that we as farmers intelligent view as possible great question.

LIFE IN MACEDONIA.

It is Very Much in the Open, With Little or No Privacy.

We arose early one February morning and left our fairly clean hotel in Neapolis for four hours of travel over the modern road near the Via Egnatia, which should take us to ancient Philippopolis. Our vehicle was a somewhat dilapidated hack, such as Americans are familiar with at almost every considerable railway station, but a surprisingly comfortable conveyance for this part of the world. Rattling down some steep, roughly paved streets, we came to the center of the old Neapolis, passed near the great Roman aqueduct and ascended another steep street on the other side of the market place.

Early as it was, we found that the people of Kavalla were up and doing. The stalls of the fruit men were attractive with oranges, pomegranates, lemons and dates. The vegetable dealers displayed a tempting array of cauliflower, cabbages, onions, okra, leeks and potatoes.

As in all eastern cities, there was no privacy. The cook was preparing his breakfast on the sidewalk, the shoemaker was plying his awl, the tailor his needle, and the blacksmith was shoeing his horses almost in the very street.—Christian Herald.

Stevenson on Invalidism.

Robert Louis Stevenson, himself the most heroic of invalids, would have agreed with Sir George Birdwood in his contempt for the valetudinarian. "To forego all the issues of living in a parlor with a regulated temperature," he writes, "as if that were not to die a hundred times over, and for ten years at a stretch! As if it were not to die in one's own lifetime, and without even the sad immunities of death! As if it were not to die, and yet be patient spectators of our own pitiable change! The permanent possibility is preserved, but the sensations carefully held at arm's length, as if one kept a photographic plate in a dark chamber. It is better to lose health like a spendthrift than to waste it like a miser. It is better to live and be done with it than to die daily in the sickroom." —London Chronicle.

California's Petroleum.

Petroleum was produced in a small way in California very early in the history of the country—in fact, long before it was invaded by the army of gold seekers. Mr. C. Morrell, a druggist in San Francisco, is commonly credited with being the first to attempt the distillation of kerosene from crude petroleum. This was in 1857, but several years prior to that Andreas Pico made illuminating oil from petroleum which he obtained in the Newhall region in Los Angeles county. This oil was burned, so it is said, in lamps in the mission San Fernando.—Argonaut.

A MOTHER'S TRIBUTE.*Pathetic Ceremony at Night on an Atlantic Ocean Liner.

Strange, perhaps, to us, but very touching, is the tender, intimate solicitude of the Latin races for their dead—"I nostri morti" as the Italians are wont to call those whom they have lost. There is a simple pathos in the incident that was related by a passenger on one of the great transatlantic mail boats.

A few days before the steamer sailed from Havre its captain received a letter from a peasant woman of Indre-et-Loire. In it she explained that her only son had been a cook on the Titanic and had gone down with the vessel. She was sending, she wrote, a cross which she begged him to drop into the sea at the spot where the disaster occurred.

The cross came in due time, a simple cross of wood, fashioned rudely enough by the mother's fingers, and one night, as the great vessel neared Newfoundland, for the space of a minute her engines ceased to pulse, and the little wooden cross, weighted with lead, sank beneath the waves of the Atlantic.—Paris Cor. importance.

A deputation is being arranged from Grand River points to interview the Prime Minister. At a general meeting of the Grand River Improvement Association held in Galt it seemed to be agreed that the Government had been very slow in dealing with the matter. It was the prevalent opinion that something should have been done before. Other rivers besides the Grand ought to be investigated also.

WHAT WESTERVILLE THINKS.

An interesting item appears in the current number of the New Republic, a temperance paper published in Westerville, Ohio. "Minister Rowell" it says, "on behalf of the Ontario Government introduced into the Provincial Parliament a resolution for the total abolition of the saloon in that Province." The text of the resolution is given in full,

The item is peculiar in so far as it refers to "Minister Rowell" who is said to have introduced the resolution on behalf of the Government.

The actual explanation of the incident is this: Mr. Rowell has been doing such good work and has been attracting so much attention that the people in Ohio not knowing the facts of the case at first hand took it for granted that he was a member of the Government. They did not realize that as a matter of fact it was the Government which was really blocking the proposed Temperance Legislation and the Opposition which was advocating it.

NEW FACTORY ACT.

Of special importance in the House is the new Factory Act which is now ready to be taken up for its third reading, but which will be strenuously opposed by the Opposition. Nothing this session has revealed so clearly—at least so say Labor representatives—the unprogressiveness of the Whitney Government. This new Act, one would have supposed, would have incorporated in it clauses to improve the conditions under which employees (especially women and children) work; for the reduction of the hours of labor; paying special attention to health and surroundings of employees; and for securing safety devices on machinery. As a matter of fact none of these improvements have been added to the Act in spite of the vigorous advocacy of Mr. N. W. Rowell, K. C., Allan Studholme, Labor Member for East Hamilton, and all the members of the Opposition. Numerous amendments tending to the improvement of factory conditions have been voted down by the Government majority in the House.

ALFALFA

(First Prize Essay, written by member of Napanee Agricultural Class, 1913. Winner, Chas. McKim, Switzerville.)

Alfalfa, also called Lucerne, is a hardy perennial, leguminous plant which produces stems of an upright growth, flowers in purple clusters, and roots which penetrate deeply into the ground. It has been grown in the region of the Mediterranean Sea for more than two thousand years, and thrives well on soils of various kinds and elevations, and in climates of different degrees of temperature and of different amounts of rainfall.

ALFALFA THE GREAT SOIL BUILDER.

Alfalfa is a great re-builder of soil fertility, as it has the power of making use of the free nitrogen of the atmosphere, and of the valuable mineral constituents of the subsoil. The abundant growth of roots in an Alfalfa sod has a very beneficial effect in the improvement of both the chemical and the mechanical conditions of the soil.

PROPER SOIL FOR ALFALFA.

For the best results with Alfalfa, not only is it important to select land that is in a good state of fertility to enable the young plants to get a proper start during the first year, and that has a deep, sweet subsoil with moisture surrounding its particles and mellow to enable the alfalfa roots to spread in various directions in search of moisture and of plant food, but it is also important to select land which is comparatively free from seeds and
roots of weeds and other troublesome plants, in order to give the Alfalfa full possession of soil.

broken off. As the leaves are the richest part of the plant, special care should be exerted to have as few as possible lost. After the crop becomes sufficiently wilted it should be raked into windrows or in the coils.

Alfalfa as hay is very valuable. Investigations show Alfalfa hay to contain about fifty per cent more digestible protein than hay from red clover. Alfalfa hay ranks in constituents nearly equal to bran, but is hardly as digestible.

Alfalfa hay is certainly exceedingly nutritious and is keenly relished by all kinds of stock.

ALFALFA AS A PASTURE CROP.

Alfalfa as pasture is excellent, but care should be taken not to pasture it too close so as to destroy the crown. Excellent results can be obtained from pasturing hogs and poultry on Alfalfa.

What makes the landscape look so fair,
What plant repays the Farmer's toil,

What grows in loam and clay and sand,
What lifts the mortgage off the land,
What crop is cut six times a year,
And no foul weeds in it appear?

Alfalfa.

What makes the swine so healthy feel,
And never raise a hungry squeal,
That wholesome food that never fails
To put three curls into their tails?

Alfalfa.

What makes all other stock look nice,
And brings the highest market price,
What fills the milk pail, feeds the calf,
And makes the old cow almost laugh?

Alfalfa.

What makes the poultry good as gold,
When eggs are at a big price sold,
What makes the happy colts all play,
While mothers graze throughout the day?

What is the crop that always pays,
And will mature in forty days,
Resisting drought, and frost, and heat,
Whose roots reach down one hundred feet?

comparatively free from seeds and
roots of weeds and other troublesome
plants, in order to give the Alfalfa full
possession of soil.

MELLOW SEED BED ESSENTIAL.

In all cases the soil should be well cultivated and a fine seed-bed formed, in order to permit of a quick and uniform germination of the seed after it has been sown. The finer you have your seed-bed the better results you will have. The quality of seed is very important. It should be large, uniform and bright of strong vitality and free from impurities, especially from seeds of weeds of other plants which are troublesome in a field of Alfalfa.
Where Alfalfa has never been grown the seed should be inoculated. Alfalfa, like other (leguminous) crops, thrives best when grown in the presence of certain species of Bacteria. These when present in the soil, enter the roots of the plants forming enlargements on the roots called nodules, which are filled with nitrifying bacteria. These minute forms of life make use of the free nitrogen of the air, which is thus transferred to the plants, making them decidedly more valuable both in food constituents and in fertilizing materials.

It is possible for alfalfa to grow fairly well without the presence of these minute forms of life, by making use of the nitrogen already in the soil. Their presence, however, seems to have the double value of increasing both the quantity and the quality of the crop. Plant life cannot make use of organic nitrogen which must be broken up in some soluble form.
This is accomplished through the medium of bacteria.

NURSE-CROP.

I think it better to seed down Alfalfa with a nurse crop, the best crop being Barley. The Barley should be sown not more than one bushel to the acre. On most of our Ontario farms the land is badly infested with foxtail.
The nurse crop helps to check the growth of all weeds and leaves a good stubble to hold the snow which helps to protect the Alfalfa through the winter.

VARIETIES OF ALFALFA.

There are a few varieties of the wild forms of Alfalfa which are characterized by differences in the color and in the size of the flowers, in the coverings and in the structure of the pods.
Botanical authorities, however, have not made it clear that there are marked differences in the botanical structure of the Alfalfa which are under cultivation. It is, nevertheless, true that the continuous growing of Alfalfa for long periods of time in different countries and under varying conditions of soil and climate, has furnished numerous strains or varieties which vary in important characteristics, when considered from a practical standpoint.

Different forms or strains of Alfalfa are known principally by the country in which they have been grown for a number of years, as Turkestan, European.
The best strain or variety of seed to grow is the seed grown under the same climatic conditions as exist in Ontario. The best variety is Ontario Variegated Alfalfa.

ALFALFA AS A HAY CROP.

For the production of hay Alfalfa is a most valuable crop. Under favorable conditions it produces large yields of hay of excellent quality. Very great care, however, should be taken to cut Alfalfa just as it is coming into blossom, and always before it is more than on third in bloom, as the crop very rapidly depreciates in digestibility after it has reached a certain stage of maturity. Great care should be taken not to let the Alfalfa lay too long in the hot, dry sunshine, as the leaves soon become crisp and are easily

George Washington. Everything seemed

Richard smoked in silence for a time, then presently said, with affected carelessness:

"Mr. Renwyck, what you say is no doubt based on sound judgment and business and—er—legislative experience; yet, on the other hand, it strikes me that you are taking rather a heavy risk for the sake of mere money."

"Ah," cried the old financier, with a snap of his heavy jaw, "now you've struck it! And I don't mind telling you the real reason. It isn't the money. Hang the money! I'm doing this to get even with one man—one man who represents the Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company, just as I represent the Longmatt Development and Construction company. He isn't a friend of mine—at least no longer—and, by George, I've got him! And, what's more, I'm going to squeeze him till his body is as dry as the state of Texas! I think you told me that you knew his son. The old man's name is Bill Williams."

Richard's brain was in a whirl. The

CHAPTER IX.

BREAKFAST the next morning did not pass pleasantly for Richard, who began to detest the role he was assuming with all his honest American heart-honest until this mad idea of substitution obsessed him, that is. First of all, he wanted to get away by himself and think the thing out undisturbed by troublesome surroundings. He determined to go for a long ride—alone, if possible—and with a good horse under him perhaps his brain would work and devise some loophole of escape. Fatuous dream! There was no loophole. He would palter with the truth no longer. No! He would speak at once and get the worst part of it over. Then he would be free—free from his own conscience—and she would be hopelessly and forever lost to him. Well, he couldn't help it; his heart would break, but it had to be done, whatever the consequences to himself and the heart aforesaid.

Fully determined—so he thought—on this desperate course, he volunteered to drive Mr. Renwyck to the station in the trap. They would start early and drive slowly. There would be time. He would tell the old shark all and defy him to wreck Bill Williams with any underhand scheme. He would claim to have come to Irvington for the very purpose of unearthing the conspirators. He would join forces with his dad and fight Jacob Renwyck in the open, flinging aside discretion, love.

It was hard to think all this, and it would be harder still to say it. As he considered it the pendulum of his thoughts swung to the other extreme. Could he lay love aside? How sweet she looked in her simple morning gown—over which some artist of dress creation had labored days to produce that effect of artless innocence had he but known it—as she smiled and passed him those delicious rolls, as if it were breakfast food he lacked. He wanted her more than anything else on earth. She was worth a thousand harbor companies. His dad would understand and forgive after seeing her. But would conscience understand and forgive?

I am afraid Lord Croyland did not shine as a table companion that morning, and his muttered excuse about a headache seemed too feminine for credulity. When an irresistible force meets—

The drive to the station was rapid and vacantly while he screwed in his monocle and stared at his companion. "Really—'pon my word—I—"

Michael Corrigan burst into a laugh.

"Come, come, Dick"—How good that monosyllable sounded after this cursed Croyland business! Now he could understand why Bills hated to be called Woolsey. "It won't do," continued Corrigan genially. "I'm too old a bird to be caught with such salt. Out with it, boy! What's the meaning of this tomfoolery?"

It had come at last, then! No confession would be necessary. With a sudden revulsion of feeling Richard experienced a great sense of relief. Fortune had decided for him.

"Mr. Corrigan," said Richard, holding out his hand—he knew when he was beaten—while his features became radiant with smiles, "when you came through that door awhile ago I wished you safely in hades. Let's get out into the sunshine. I want to make a clean breast of it, for, to tell you the truth, I'm in the devil of a pickle."

Mr. Corrigan laughed again and led the way through the front hall. On the veranda they met Miss Harriet coming from the garden with her arms full of fresh cut roses.

"Going for a walk?" she asked. "If you wait a moment I'd like to join you."

"Young person," said her uncle with mock severity, "there is hardly enough of Lord Croyland to go around, it seems. I've got him for half an hour, and I'm going to keep him! Shoo!"

He took Richard's arm and led him along the gravel path.

"Is that the reason?" he whispered, slyly jerking his thumb in the direction of his niece. Richard blushed. "Oh, you young dog! Well, I can't blame you, Dick. Great girl, isn't she?"

They had now reached a shaded bench in a secluded part of the grounds, where they seated themselves and prepared for the confessional.

"You see," began the fat little lawyer, who seemed to exude good humor from every pore, "at first I couldn't exactly make out what you were up to, you scamp, so I drew you out on our friend Napoleon. You are not well up on the history or the statuary of your beloved country, Dicky, boy. Brush up!"

Richard laughed and asked:

"But you were on to me when I took that paddock fence, weren't you? It gave me the creeps when I heard your compliment."

"Of course I was," assented Mr. Corrigan, shaking with amusement. "You don't suppose I lived in Texas two years for nothing but my health! And on your own father's ranch too! I had been told that Renwyck had 'captured a real live nobleman.' I was just strolling over to have a peep at him, when, lo and behold, I find him tearing around a horse lot on one devil as if another were after him!" Mr. Corrigan paused to chuckle. "But, Dick," he said presently, "you made one grave mistake."

"What was that?"

You should have worn a two foot sombrero, scooped up Harriet's handkerchief at a mad gallop, fired off a brace of guns and plugged holes in Renwyck's hat. Then they would have known you were an Englishman. Now, let's have your story."

Richard looked at him, divided be-him he confessed in his match between them was beyond expression.

"My boy," he laughed gloriously! And now the friend at court it ought beautifully. Don't mind you a little. It will only take your side. What is there on the programme?"

Richard frowned thoughtfully and began to pace up and down.

"Mr. Corrigan," he barked. "I haven't told you the whole story. What makes it the more I don't see how I can, well, it would be a sort of confidence."

"Anything serious?"

"Yes, very. That's sleep last night. Matte to such a pass that I feel Mr. Renwyck who I am medicine like a burglar act."

Mr. Corrigan's face fell.

"I am exceedingly i that?" He thought for a moment, then looked up with a contagious smile. "See her have you betray a confi thing in the world, my are two ways of looking at. Why not engage lawyer? Every scalawag has a right to counsel, not hesitate to bare your soul. Come, Dick, I'll accept Croyland's excellent entainer, and we'll get business."

Richard brightened handed a cigar, held a lit end. "It's whipping the de stumps, I suppose, but I'm way out of it. I do ne need it bad. I'll tell you one condition."

The lawyer nodded, p gazed up into the tree above his head, continued:

"The condition is th about to tell you must solute secret, no matt judgment happens to that and I'll talk; ot clam."

"Dick," said the old man, "you have followed the legal thirty-two years, and few have found cause to c discretion. This is a f and I'm going to earn troubling you?"

The moment Mr. Corrigan made the proposition which had made to Richard on evening he choked with his latest client was forced him vigorously on the balance of the narrative, tuated with his chuckle that it was concluded v

Richard was handicap appreciation of the job he peared to him to be a better indeed. When his lishted he observed solemnly,

"You see, Mr. Corrigan. If I keep my mouth shut, you will make it hot for d graph dad and give him just as sure as a gun, he and wipe up the earth-wyck. I'm in a red Corrigan, with my feath. I've just got to

I think you told me that you knew his son. The old man's name is Bill Williams."

Richard's brain was in a whirl. The Houston, Matagorda City and Gulf Railroad and Improvement company was his father's pet, the darling of his heart. He had worked over it, slaved over it and owned the controlling interest, in which he had invested an enormous sum. If what Mr. Renwyck said was true the coming crash would overwhelm his father completely. Not only had that gentleman invested his own money in the company, but he had induced his friends to join with him, and well Richard knew that his father would feel responsible for their loss. Again, the young man was not the kind of man who could stand meekly by and see his dear old dad bested by an enemy. With a mental gasp he realized that he stood in possession of information by which he could turn the tables on Jacob Renwyck and watch Bill Williams do the squeezing.

"Jerusalem, how dad will laugh!" he mused, then bit his tongue at a sudden thought which came to him.

He could not tell his father!

To pose as an English nobleman for the sake of a joke or even to win a girl was one thing; to receive a man's confidence in that capacity and by means of it detach him from the major portion of his fortune was quite another. Richard's mind was made up instantly. A confession of his deceit would cause a scene beyond doubt, and, moreover, his hope of winning Miss Harriet would fade in the general wreck, but even with this depressing fact in view he could not for an instant bring himself to be branded as a swindler and a thief.

"Mr. Renwyck," he began, but the daring speculator once more checked the good intention.

"Now, my dear Croyland," he begged, "I don't want you to go into this thing prematurely. Sleep on it. Think it over tomorrow, and we'll talk about it again in the evening. I'm going to town in the morning to attend a quiet meeting of the new company's stockholders. I will then be in a position to show you even more clearly where we stand. Let's go to bed." He linked his arm through Richard's and started across the grass. "By the way, I have a new team of horses coming out tomorrow on trial. I should like to get your opinion of them before I buy."

The light of dawn found Richard still staring at the ceiling and wondering how he could get out of the tangle. No longer was he justified in concealing his identity on any pretext. He must confess to Mr. Renwyck. But how could he do that when everything was progressing so favorably, when he was making so good an impression both on Mr. Renwyck and, as he hoped, his daughter? How could he throw away his opportunity there? On the other hand, how could he see his dad walk blindly into the mouths of a set of New York sharks? Over and over he turned the questions till his brain grew addled and his head was aching viciously. One of two things he must do. But which? What good would a confession do anyway? To tell his father afterward would not make him less culpable. He turned and twisted in his bed, but found no solution of the problem. The questions hit each other like wild express trains on a single track, and the solitary engineer had no earthly chance to jump.

"Now, it's this way," he murmured headache seemed too feminine for credulity. When an irresistible force meets—

The drive to the station was rapid and brief. The undecided Richard did not speak after all. His host persisted in doing all the talking, which was mainly enlarging on that precious scheme of his.

"Au revoir!" said Mr. Renwyck, stepping from the trap. "That's my train. Think over my proposition and let me know this evening. I'll send the veterinary out to look at Hawk today. Goodby, Croyland."

Richard drove slowly back. None of the ladies was about when he arrived, so he wandered into the billiard room. He was knocking the balls around aimlessly when he was suddenly accosted by the one person in the world whose company he least desired.

"Good morning, Lord Croyland," called Mr. Michael Corrigan from the doorway. "I just came over to look you up."

Now, what did he want? Well, whatever it was, he would find the Texan was not to be bluffed. Richard's spirits actually rose. This was something tangible that threatened, and Richard loved to deal with the real. It was the abstract that involved him in difficulties that he hated.

"That's very kind of you, indeed," drawled Richard, with a ring of challenge in his voice which the lawyer did not fail to note with concealed amusement. "Fond of billiards?"

"Oh, in a way, yes. I'm most too short and fat to play without the bridge, but I'll take a cue from you with pleasure if I may."

"Now, I wonder if he means anything by that remark," thought Richard as he handed him the stick.

The game began briskly, but soon languished, as did the conversation, Richard making an occasional brilliant shot and missing the easy ones. Mr. Corrigan by steady, consistent play ran up a good score and between times watched his opponent out of the corners of his eyes.

"I shouldn't say you were up in your usual form, Lord Croyland. Sleep well?"

"No," said Richard, eagerly seizing the opportunity to speak the whole truth and nothing but it, "I didn't."

"Too bad!" murmured the little man, with an exaggerated sympathy that did not impose on his victim, while he gravely chalked his cue. "American beds are hard to get used to, eh?" He received no answer and leaned across the table for a difficult shot, paused and regarded the young man thoughtfully. "Lord Croyland, I am after a certain piece of information and have reason to believe that you can give it to me."

"I shall be pleased, I am sure," said Richard, with admirably simulated indolence, although he was never more keenly alive to the possibilities of a situation in his life.

The little man laid his cue upon the table, dusted his hands and planted himself squarely in front of the pseudo nobleman.

"What—in your opinion—is the most approved method—of branding a heifer?"

It was coming, then? Well, he would admit nothing, deny everything. There was no law of business, honor or love to compel him to confess anything to Mr. Corrigan.

"Branding a heifer?" repeated Rich-Renwyck's hat. Then they would have known you were an Englishman. Now, let's have your story."

Richard looked at him, divided between seriousness and amusement.

"But how did you know that it was I?"

"Deduction," smiled the lawyer.

"I don't understand."

"It's simple. Had a letter from your father a few days since in which he told me you were in New York and asked me to look after the tenderfoot. When I saw you ride I guessed. When I heard you talk I knew, for, Dicky, boy, as an Englishman you might pass muster in Rio Janeiro, but as an actor—well, you'd starve!"

"Come, come, Dick. It won't do," continued Corrigan gently.

"But the others—do they suspect?"

"Not a bit, I believe. They're dazzled, blinded by your coronet. Few Americans in New York can see straight in the presence of a lord. You're safe so far."

"Thank heaven!"

"Don't count too much on the blindness of one, however."

"And that one?"

"Harriet. But fire away. I'm listening."

Richard thereupon recounted his adventures, beginning with the cattle stampede at home and his willingness to come north in the hope of finding the girl. He told of his meeting with the real Lord Croyland and how that gentleman had coolly taken the name of Richard Williams. Then he made a clean breast of his own deception and narrated every detail of his experiences, with the exception of his business conversation with Mr. Renwyck last night.

During the recital the lawyer fairly bubbled over with amusement, applauding each experience with a series of delighted chuckles. That Richard was pulling wool over the eyes of Jacob Renwyck was a keen joy to the little man, who vividly pictured the chagrin of his brother-in-law when the comedy came to an end. He loved Harriet dearly, and now as he looked at the handsome, manly boy before

"But, my dear sir," cried Dick, with some asperity, "I had no such intention, I assure you. The information was—well, it was forced on me."

"Aha!" exclaimed the old lawyer knowingly. "That's just the delicate point. I'm speaking legally. Of course you're innocent. You know it, and I believe it, but how about a jury of your peers? To put it bluntly, you have taken the name of a wounded and helpless man without his knowledge or consent. You have bribed his servant. Bad point. Dick—very bad. Then you creep into a confiding old gentleman's house and worm away the secrets of his inmost heart. The alleged pursuit of the girl is merely a blind to cover your deep laid, crafty, nefarious designs, which!"

"Hold on, for God's sake!" vehemently protested Richard, appalled at the revelation of his perfidy by the lawyer's merciless logic, which was about as hard to bear as if it had been a truthful indictment. "Don't put it that way! You make me feel like an actual criminal. Next I'll be stealing their cut glass and silver hairbrushes."

"I am merely looking at it from a legal point of view," said the little man solemnly. "To confess to Jacob now is the very worst policy imaginable."

"Then what am I to do?" demanded the young man savagely.

"Brazen it out," advised his counsel, striving to suppress the dancing humor in his eyes. "But, for the Lord's sake, Dicky, boy, do brush up on English history."

"And what of dad?"

Mr. Corrigan began to chuckle and rub his hands violently.

"I'm afraid," he said, with great conviction, "that Bill will have to play this hand alone. You can't help him, young man, and you've got to trust to luck. If your father finds out about the deal he may pull down Jacob's ladder; if not—well, I'm almost as sorry for Bill as I am for his son."

Richard drew his brows together in a troubled frown.

"And is that all the advice you can give me?" he asked, hoping against hope.

"No," said the little man; "there is one more suggestion, and a sound one, too, by George! My vision is a shade imperfect owing to creeping age, but I think I see Harriet over yonder under the trees. I, as your counsel, direct you to go and talk to her."

This last piece of advice was too good to be neglected, and Richard, dismissing his cares, followed it forthwith.

CHAPTER X.

WHEN the young Texan had got out of earshot Mr. Corrigan leaned back and laughed till his plump sides could stand the strain no more. Rarely had he passed so amusing and delightful a half hour. He lived the lonely life of a wealthy old bachelor, and the comedy had come to him in the shape of a comrade. He liked what he had seen tak a seat upon a stone, begged him to do likewise and began fanning herself with her hat.

"Do you know," she whispered, "I think I shall trust you and tell you a secret."

"All right," he said carelessly. "Fire—er—I mean do so, by all means." He seated himself and added dramatically, "Believe me, maiden, it shall be sacred with me."

"There!" she cried in triumph. "I knew you could do it, though Harriet says flatly—just flatly—that you couldn't."

"Couldn't what?"

"Act."

"Well, she's right," agreed Richard. "I can't. I've been told so before. Where do you get your strange delusions?"

Once more her big baby eyes looked upward with a pleading glance.

"But you'd try if I asked you, wouldn't you? You couldn't resist if I begged you—er—real hard, could you?"

"Nothing short of assassination could make me refuse you," said Richard, emphasizing the pronoun and looking sadly out across the Hudson. It was wrong, of course, but he couldn't help it, and really she was pretty enough to excuse so venal a lapse.

"Oh, you dear, delightful man!" chirruped the little lady. "Now, listen. Don't look at the river. Look at me."

"I dare not."

"Nonsense! You said you were not afraid of butterflies."

"I was wrong. I am of one."

"Don't be afraid of me. I won't hurt you," said the highly flattered girl laughingly.

"I breathe again. Go on."

"Well, Lord Croyland, we are going to have a little one act play on Fri-

"Rapturous, but dangerous for me," asserted Richard gravely. "Is Miss Renwyck in the play?"

"Why, of course she is, stupid! She's getting it up herself and has the leading part."

Richard brightened. Private the- atricals were not so silly, after all.

"What sort of a part will she play?"

"Oh, the serious part!" his companion advised him. "It's more real acting than mine, of course, but I like the love part best, don't you?" Richard nodded, and the debutante continued:

"Harriet is the rich heiress, you know. And, oh, she's going to wear the Renwyck diamonds! Her father will bring them up from the city tomorrow night. She'll look awfully stunning in them. You are engaged to her—in the play, I mean—but you'll find out that you love me best, and it's an awfully exciting scene. You and I—in the play. I mean—you and I are in a room together, and you tell me how much you love me!"

"Hadn't we better practice a little bit now?"

"Don't you think you could do it without practice?"

"I shall need to acquire—er—restraint in the presence of such temptation, you know."

"Oh, I see. I guess it won't be necessary for you to be too restrained. It's beautiful, so impassioned—the language, you understand!"

"I shall try to live up to it."

"And just when you kiss me!"

"I'm sure it would be best for us to try that in private."

"Not at all. We can make believe about that part, you know."

"That's not true acting."

"Isn't it? Oh, we'll see about that later, and we needn't rehearse that anyway."

"But I'm sure to be so awfully awkward about that. I've had so little practice in my short life."

"You poor little innocent Englishman! We'll fix that later."

"Oh, happy hope!"

"Will you listen to me, Lord Croyland?"

"I'm silent."

"Harriet comes in and denounces you. Don't you think it's perfectly delicious?"

"Dazzling."

"Then it's settled. I'm so glad. Come on and let's dig up more roots."

Miss Imogene Chittenden proceeded to pick wild flowers. Mr. Richard Williams carried them in the four ounce basket and communed with himself. Denunciation at the present speaking was rather a sore subject with him and coming from the lips of the girl he worshiped in a one act play in which he was some one else was more than flesh and blood could stand. It had too definite a relation to his present circumstances to be comfortable. On the whole, he decided to get out of that play if he could. He did not want Harriet denouncing him, even in fun. She might have to do it in earnest later, and he did not wish her to have the advantage of a previous rehearsal. He was getting sensitive, he realized, but he wanted to see her alone, to talk with her as a kind of relief from the troubles that were gathering around him in uncomfortable, sticky coils.

half hour. He lived the lonely life of a wealthy old bachelor, and the comedy had come to him in the shape of a godsend. He liked what he had seen of the young man immensely, and he was prepared to like him more for his father's sake, but he determined to make him suffer as much as possible in payment for his reckless assurance. Besides, he had another end in view, the success of which depended largely upon the son of his old friend Bill Williams. Every feature of the game was a joy to his merry heart, and in order to watch its progress he determined to be a frequent visitor at Restmore, which promised to belie its name and become a troubled spot, after all. Rising from the bench at last, he cut across lots toward his own home, half a mile away, measuring every stride with a sort of chuckling pedometer.

Meanwhile Richard followed the lawyer's counsel, not only as to closing his mouth with regard to Mr. Renwyck, but as to opening it without delay with regard to Mr. Renwyck's daughter. This at least was his intention, but he found himself once more disappointed. Miss Harriet was in her favorite seat on the lawn, with an open book resting in her lap. Richard's footfalls made no sound on the soft green turf, and, unconscious of his approach, before he was within hailing distance she arose abruptly and went into the house. He followed her forthwith, but just as he reached the veranda steps a sprightly little figure bounced out and greeted him effusively. Needless to say, it was not Miss Renwyck. Miss Imogene Chittenden was more fluffily irritating to the adventurer than usual. Her motions, like her manner of speech, were nervous and spasmodic, not unlike the movements of a humming bird over a bunch of honeysuckle, with the lord representing the fragrant blossoms.

"Why, Lord Croyland!" she twittered, with something between a giggle and a shriek, "how very fortunate! I was just going out to pick wild flowers. I've never picked wild flowers with a real nobleman. Please say you are just dying to give me a new experience."

She looked up at him with a baby-like air of innocence and admiration and laughed again.

"I—I should be delighted," said Richard, telling the first downright lie which had passed his lips since arriving at Irvington.

He relieved her of the absurd basket she was carrying on her arm and started across the fields, cursing inwardly at the fate which linked him with this troublesome and irresponsible little creature and striving outwardly to be decently polite to her. Unconscious of his cogitation, Miss Imogene fluttered at his side, now inquiring idiotic small talk into his bored ears, now pouncing with little squeals of delight upon some gaudily colored weed and depositing it in the basket.

"It is so good of you to come," she said, with a melting glance. "It isn't heavy enough to tire you, is it? You are so strong, you know, and so brave."

She alluded to the basket, which weighed perhaps four ounces. Richard assured her that he thought he could stand the strain and that he was not in the least afraid of butterflies, the only living thing they had met so far, which brought forth a fresh outburst of gigglesome joy. Presently she cause you just said you would, and I know you will do it just beautifully, because I told Harriet you could, and, having promised, of course you can't refuse now, when everything has been"—

"Hold on; hold on!" interrupted Richard. "I'm sort of losing my grip on things. Slow down to a trot and let's get our bearings."

This sounded very unlike an English nobleman, but the young lady in her excitement failed to notice.

"You see," she began again, "the play is called 'The Man and the Bird.' You are the man, and"—

"And you are the bird," completed Richard. "I thought as much. Well, go on."

Miss Imogene dimpled with pleasure and applauded his quick perception.

"Yes," she said; "I am the bird, and you—it's only a play, you know, of course—and you're just desperately in love with me."

"I couldn't act that part. It's too real, and"—

"Oh, yes, you can! I thought you wouldn't find it difficult. I'll help you."

"That settles it. I'm lost."

"And, besides, it will make Cornelius Van der Awe just frantic. He isn't in the cast, you know. We've put him in the audience, and he has just to sit with her as a kind of relief from the troubles that were gathering around him in uncomfortable, sticky coils. But at every turn his innocent purpose was frustrated, and he found himself in the clutches of some one else, an inquisitor like Michael Corrigan, a chat-terbox like Miss Chittenden.

The Woman Who's Determined to Please Too Much.

HOPELESS TO CHOKE HER OFF

Chafing Dish Set In Crash Toweling Is Just the Gift For Hostess Who Is Fond of Entertaining Informally at Supper or Luncheon.

Dear Elsa—I have just come back to New York from a weekend spent with Margaret W., and I never leave her charming country home without the uncomfortable feeling that I have been extremely rude. Margaret is one of the few remaining specimens of politeness left to us in this rude, busy age. Indeed, she is so anxious to be nice and to have her guests enjoy themselves that she defeats her own good object by being too solicitous of their well-being. In other words, she is one of those "pressing" people who make the average woman feel like "saying things" at times.

Here is an example of what I mean: "Won't you have one of these cakes, dear?" she cried one afternoon at tea, her bright eyes falling on my empty plate.

"Thank you very much, but I've quite finished."

"Oh, but you must try one of these. They're homemade."

"I'm sure they are delicious, but really—"

"Just one, now; just to please me."

So I was obliged to meekly dispose of the cake, and as soon as I had come to the last crumb Margaret began again.

"Now I'm sure you will have another, won't you?"

"No, thank you, really, Margaret."

"Oh, do; I have not nearly finished yet. Do keep me company. Or perhaps you did not like my cake?"

"It was splendid!" I managed to reply, quite honestly, for Margaret is a fine cook. "But, truly—"

Well, it was all off. Margaret smiled a sad, wistful smile, which said as plain as words, "I'm so sorry you didn't care for it, for if you had you would have taken another one."

She doesn't seem to realize that, however nice a cake may be, there exists to the vulgar mind such a thing as well, repletion is the prettiest term I can call it, though very small people have expressed the same meaning by announcing that they are "full now."

Then one day Margaret began talking of new spring frocks, and I was foolish enough to say that I was thinking of changing my dressmaker.

"The very chance for you to try the little woman who made my green gown. She's so smart and so cheap. She lives at— There, I've forgotten, but I'll look it up in my address book and let you know."

Now, as a matter of fact, I don't admire Margaret's green gown in the least, and Dick said it was a "shriek ply to his father when that dear old gentleman suggested that his letter to Mary, the housemaid, was rather short?

"Not a bit of it," said Sam. "She'll vish there was more, and that's the great art o' letter writin'."

Somehow those words always come into my head as I travel home from Margaret's.

I wonder, Elsa, how you will like the dollies and centerpiece I am making for a friend who does a lot of informal entertaining—chafing dish parties and the like. The set is of blue and white barred tea toweling. A yard and five-eighths of eighteen inch wide toweling makes the twelve dollies, which are nine inches square. A square of the toweling was too narrow to make a good looking centerpiece, so I compromised on an oblong table runner.

The edges of both dollies and centerpiece are finished with heavily padded buttonholing done with mercerized cotton the shade of the blue bar in the crash. Across the center of each dolly and at both ends of the runner center piece will be placed the initials of the owner in cross stitch, carried out in two shades of blue. On a polished mahogany table the set is stunning.

Time's up, so auf wiedersehen,

MABEL.

The demand for the one piece gown of simple cut is increasing. This costume is an essentially comfortable, satisfactory garment which every woman likes to wear, and the vogue of the separate long coat on the street makes it a doubly useful one.

Here is a new one piece model with the closing at the right side making a notable feature and with a dropping shoulder line. It includes a separate chemisette that can be worn when occasion requires, and the model makes an excellent one for indoor wear at the present season and for the street gown when that is being made in anticipation of mild days later on.

TAILORED SUITS.

Bright Colors and Ribbed Materials Lead in Spring Fashions.

It goes without saying that nicely and cleverly tailored suits of ribbed ratine and velours de laine cloths will be quickly bought up at the sales the shops are now offering. Those who think of the morrow will go for the lighter makes, as spring advances with positive strides once we are launched into the new year. She who is yearning for color will find these ribbed ratines peculiarly satisfying in vivid shades. It is a sure thing that such suits as these in cerise, purple or that nice green that is about just now will not have to wait long on their pegs.

Tailors are turning to color chiefly because these new tailor materials present it with such alluring texture. The less these fabrics are trimmed the better, just important buttons, with perhaps the collar facings of contrasting fabric, although even this last is at a discount, as ribbed ratine and velours make such agreeable collar facings themselves. By the way, there is a delightful chic about long wrap coats in these materials.

Making steady headway in the approval of all those whose aim it is to keep in the front ranks of fashion are the beautiful Bulgarian embroideries. These, for the nonce, have largely ousted the Japanese, Chinese and oriental fancies. "Bulgar" is the pet abbreviation of the moment. There is even a "Bulgar" cloth, a rather rough, clumsy weave with a patterned border, a woven effect to simulate the broderies characteristic of the troubous Bulgarian state.

To many minds, however, quite the most fascinating medium of expression is provided in some little colors, adjustable affairs, that give the most delightful and novel touch to either corsage or coat. The color harmonies introduced are singularly artistic, a dull oxidized thread frequently entering into the scheme, sometimes as a narrow bordering theme or again interwoven with the groundwork. The colors generally trend to somberness, but there is no mistake at all as to the extremely attractive nature of the "Bulgar" colorings and embroideries nor any doubt that they are prepared to take a leading place in the forthcoming season's fashions.

Here's a novel idea for a church entertainment which requires little preparation.

A rustic bridge was built out from the stage, inclosing a spare space that was used for a fishpond. Rocks and ferns were grouped along the edge of the stage, the floor was covered with green carpet, and a pretty meadow scene painted on coarse cotton was hung at the back of the stage, making a very picturesque setting for the pond. Steps led up to the bridge, and at the foot was a rustic lodge, where, on payment of a fee, the prospective fisher was given a pole and a circle of cardboard, upon which was

Trying to be tactful, I appreciatively looked at Margaret and replied: "Don't bother, dear. I think perhaps after all I'll give Mme. Blank another chance."

"Yes, but you may as well have the address, mayn't you? And I'm going to her this week, and if she says she cannot take any more orders just now I'll mention that you are a friend of mine. Or—or maybe it would be better for you to come with me."

Margaret is always full of plans, and knowing that to raise her hopes to let them fall again will hurt her feelings, I temporized by saying, "I'll think it over."

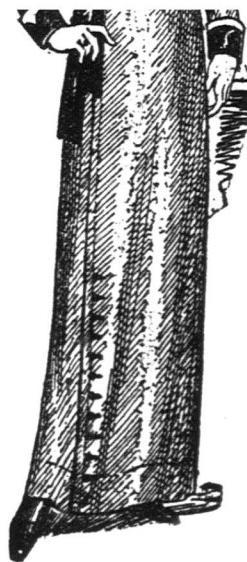

And so we went on every minute of the time I spent with her, I feeling the most ungracious creature on the earth, for Margaret never can see that she has said enough. Yet she is a dear and does mean so well.

Why don't I go to Ferncliffe next summer? Why don't I take her remedy for sore throat? Why don't I take a ticket for the current event talks? Why don't I go to her dentist?

And indeed I don't know why I don't do many of these things, except that I don't particularly want to.

CONCEALED PUNS.

James Russell Lowell Cleverly Hid One In a Review.

QUAINT HUMOR IN A SNEEZE.

The Story That Is Told of the Witty Cleric, Sydney Smith, and the Wager He Won While in the Pulpit—A Buried Pun by Nathaniel Hawthorne.

Horace E. Scudder in some reminiscences of James Russell Lowell pointed out that the poet critic even in his soberest essays would sometimes hide away a jest for the delectation of specially discerning readers. Thus in a review of Richard Grant White's edition of Shakespeare, Lowell remarked incidentally:

"To every commentator who has wantonly tampered with the text or obscured it with his inky cloud of paraphrase we feel inclined to apply the quadrasyllabic name of the brother of Agis, king of Sparta."

Professor Felton of Harvard, we are told, was the first to remember or discover that the name of Agis' brother was Eudamidas.

A more opaque mystification is contained in a passage in the first chapter of Nathaniel Hawthorne's "Our Old Home"—opaque only because he purposely seeks to conceal every clew to the fact that a pun is buried beneath the surface.

The chapter is headed "Consular Experiences." Speaking of the lights and shadows of the consul's office at Liverpool, where he was stationed during the presidency of Franklin Pierce, Hawthorne dwells with special pleasure on the visits of a young English friend, "a scholar and literary amateur, between whom and myself there sprang up an affectionate and, I trust, not transitory regard."

This friend used to come and sit or stand by the Hawthorne fireside, "with such kind endurance of the many rough republicanisms wherewith I assailed him and such frank and amiable assertion of all sorts of English prejudices and mistakes, that I understood his countrymen infinitely the better for him and was almost prepared to love the intensest Englishman of them all for his sake. It would gratify my cherished remembrance of this dear friend if I could remind him without offending him, or letting the public know it, to introduce his name upon my page. Bright was the illumination of my dusky little apartment as often as he made his appearance there."

The casual reader never suspects that Hawthorne has deftly accomplished his purpose. It does not occur to him that Bright, the apparent adjective that so cunningly begins a sentence and therefore achieves the right to a capital initial, may be alternatively read as a proper noun.

Henry A. Bright was, in fact, Hawthorne's only intimate friend in Liverpool. He was a man of wealth and position in that town, a dilettante who had published for his own amusement a historical manual "The English

Some time later John called again, and the landlady asked him if he knew who had won the lottery.

Mean Dog.

It was the early hours of the morning and not yet light when Brown woke up with a sense of impending dread.

He had suddenly remembered that it was his wife's birthday and he had bought her no present. Mrs. Brown would want to know why.

Ah, an idea! Creeping stealthily downstairs he put a very large plate on the hall table and then, still silently, let the dog into the house. The preparations were complete.

"Many happy returns of the day, my dear," he chortled. "As it is your birthday, I have got a little surprise for you. Be quick and come downstairs and see it."

Full of anticipation, the good lady followed him and was just in time to see him kick the dog out of the house and stare with amazement at the empty plate.

"If that wretched dog hasn't eaten all the beautiful cake I brought home for you last night!" he cried in well acted anger.

But he had overlooked one little fact. The dog had worn his muzzle. It took a long time to explain the incident away.—London Weekly Telegraph.

THE LITERARY RIVALS.

A Serio-Comic Scene Between Victor Hugo and the Two Dumases.

It is perhaps only natural that Mr. A. F. Davidson, the latest biographer of Victor Hugo, annoyed by the extravagant eulogies of the poet that his predecessors had written, should lay a good deal of stress on the great Frenchman's faults and failings. Of these the chief was undoubtedly vanity. Victor Hugo was inordinately vain—vain at one moment with a superb assurance that almost dignified vanity itself, at another with an uneasy jealousy at once petty and absurd.

Some years ago in a review of the work of the two Dumases, father and son, an anecdote was related that well illustrates this trait. Both of the Dumases, Victor Hugo and several others were chatting together when a foreign gentleman was presented, who made an excellent impression on every one until the moment of his departure. As he bowed in taking leave he addressed himself to the most celebrated members of the group and assured them of his pride and satisfaction in having met "the greatest poet, the greatest ro-

Henry A. Bright was, in fact, Hawthorne's only intimate friend in Liverpool. He was a man of wealth and position in that town, a dilettante who had published for his own amusement a botanical manual, "The English Flower Garden." With Hawthorne he would frequently call upon the local bookseller, Henry Young, making use of a little nook in the rear of the shop to examine and discuss the recent publications. This came to be known as Hawthorne's corner.

There is a story told about Sydney Smith that represents him as carrying a concealed pun into the pulpit with him. The most familiar version is that which Lord Houghton used to tell. When settled at his small living in Yorkshire, Sydney willingly assisted his brethren in that neighborhood in their clerical duties. On one occasion he dined with the incumbent on the preceding Saturday. The evening passed in great hilarity, the squire, Kershaw by name, being conspicuous by his loud enjoyment of the visitor's jokes.

"I am very glad that I have amused you," said Sydney Smith at parting, "but you must not laugh at my sermon tomorrow."

"I should hope I know the difference between here and a church," remarked the squire a little tartly perhaps.

"I'm not so sure of that."

"I'll bet you a guinea on it."

"Take you," said the divine.

Next day the preacher ascended the steps of the pulpit apparently suffering from a severe cold, with his handkerchief to his face, and at once sneezed out the name "Kershaw!" several times in various intonations. This ingenious assumption of the readiness with which a man would recognize his own name in sounds unintelligible to the ears of others proved accurate. The poor squire burst into guffaw, to the scandal of the congregation. The minister after looking at him with stern reproach proceeded with his discourse and won the bet.

Another version makes the victim of Sydney's jest a certain Sir Archibald Macdonald, equerry to the Duke of Sussex. Sir Archibald said to the prelate, who was then a canon at St. Paul's cathedral:

"I will come some Sunday to hear you preach."

"If you do I shall name you from the pulpit," was the reply.

Undaunted by this threat, Sir Archibald went to St. Paul's.

Sydney entered the pulpit, looked hard at the baronet and was seized with a wonderful fit of sneezing.

"Archie, Archie, Archie!" was how it sounded in Sir Archibald's ears, and he could not help a sudden laugh of recognition.—William S. Walsh in Boston Post.

To Remove a Broken Screw.

One often requires to remove a screw with one side of the head broken off. The following is a method of drawing out the broken screw with ease and without disfiguring the work: Place the screwdriver against one side of the head, and with a small block press firmly against the screwdriver, at the same time turning the screwdriver and the block. The screw will come out almost as easily as if the head were intact.

His Comparison.

Maud—So Jack compared me with something sweet, did he? The dear fellow! What was it? Marie—I don't think I should tell you. Maud—Oh, do I insist. Marie—Well, he referred to you as "the human marshmallow." You certainly had laid the powder on thick, dear.—Boston Transcript.

Politeness.

Politeness is a quality that enables a housewife to be as considerate of her husband when he upsets his cup of coffee on the tableclothes she would if he were a visitor.—Chicago Tribune.

How Unfortunate.

He—I was born on the same day on which Richard Wagner died. She—Yes, yes! A misfortune seldom comes alone.—Fliegende Blätter.

until the moment of his departure. As he bowed in taking leave he addressed himself to the most celebrated members of the group and assured them of his pride and satisfaction in having met "the greatest poet, the greatest romancer and the greatest dramatist of France."

"A little unthinking of our friend to address his parting compliment entirely to me, was it not?" remarked Victor Hugo complacently.

The others looked at each other, and he caught the look.

"The dramatist—that was you, then, you think, Dumas?" he inquired of Dumas the younger in an ominous voice. Then a thought even more appalling occurred to him, and without waiting for a reply he turned to Dumas the elder.

"The romancer, monsieur—the romancer! Do I understand you to suppose that by 'the greatest romancer' it was you who was designated? Reply, monsieur!" he demanded. His brow was thunderous, and the company held their breath, but the elder Dumas, who never found himself at a loss, answered with an easy laugh:

"But certainly it was I, and the dramatist was my son. How should it be otherwise? You did not invite the gentleman to dine, and I did. You are not a cook—a good cook, a veritable prince among cooking amateurs—and I am! His compliments, such as they are, are for us, his prospective hosts. But they are only payment in advance for the salade marseillaise of peppers stuffed with minced crab meat which I have promised to prepare for him and which I invite you to share also."

The great and only Hugo shrugged a tolerantly contemptuous shoulder.

"No; I have had enough of the society of this gentleman who speaks from the stomach, not the head," he stated grandly. "You may appreciate it, Dumas, but I do not. It is true—I am not a cook."

A Cheap Marine Telescope.

Make an oblong narrow box out of four pieces of quarter inch board about two feet long by sixteen inches wide, and fit a piece of clear, clean glass across one end, held in place by brass headed tacks driven into the wood and overlapping the glass. Fill all the cracks with sealing wax to keep out the light. Then plunge the glass end two or three inches into the water and look through the open end. This simple marine telescope is made on the principle of the more elaborate glasses through which to look at the famous gardens under the sea near the Catalina Islands.—Christian Herald.

Soaking Salt Fish.

There is a wrong as well as a right way to freshen salt mackerel and other salt fish. Those who are familiar with evaporation processes know that salt falls to the bottom. Now, if you place your mackerel with the skin side down in the pan the salt falls to the skin and remains there. If placed with the flesh side down the salt falls to the bottom of the pan, and the mackerel is freshened by the soaking in water, as it should be.
